MAKING CITIES WORK IDIQ

An Indefinite Delivery Indefinite Quantity Contract Managed by USAID’s Bureau for Economic Growth, Education and Environment (E3) Land and Urban Office

PURPOSE

The purpose of Making Cities Work is to provide access to short- and long-term technical services, training, and capacity-building in areas related to improving urban and local governance. Making Cities Work enables USAID Missions and Washington Bureaus to address the challenges and opportunities presented by the unprecedented pace of urbanization around the world and support USAID’s implementation of the Agency’s Sustainable Service Delivery in an Increasingly Urbanized World policy.

KEY CONTRACT INFORMATION

Overall IDIQ ceiling: $650 Million

Number of Consortia: Seven large business-led and three small business-led consortia

Ordering Period: September 25, 2014 to September 24, 2019. Task Orders issued in that period can continue up to September 24, 2024.

MAKING CITIES WORK TECHNICAL EXPERTISE

Making Cities Work can provide technical assistance in five functional areas:

1. Improved urban and local government public service delivery with an emphasis on transportation, water and sanitation, and solid waste management;

2. Greater autonomy, transparency, responsiveness and accountability of urban and local governments;
3. Enhanced ability of urban and local governments to adapt to climate change, improve environmental management practices and expand pollution control systems;
4. Better urban and local government disaster preparedness, response and recovery; and
5. Strengthened urban and local government finance, creditworthiness and borrowing.

In addition to these five technical areas, Making Cities Work can undertake these additional activities:

- Training of USAID staff or partner community members;
- Construction in support of technical assistance activities;
- Grants Under Contract; and
- Commodity purchases.
